> Shortly before 5 o'clock on the evening of the 25th ult. Vice-President Hendricks expired at his home in Indianapolis. Although he had been indisposed some time, his death was altogether unlooked for. At the time of dissolution Mr. Hendricks was alone, his wife having left him to meet some guests in the parlor. For some days previous to the sad event the Vice-President had been unwell, but the evening before he had so far recovered as to be able to attend a reception. He had, however, a relapse in the morning, and complained of severe pains in the stomach. Towards evening the family physician, Dr. W. C. Thompson, (who also attended Oliver P. Morton, Indiana's famous War Governor, in his last sickness,) was called in and prescribed for him. While the physician was in the room Mr. Hendricks remarked:

"Well, I'm free at last."

"What do you mean?" asked the doctor. "I mean that at last I'm free from pain." The answer satisfied both the doctor and Mrs. Hendricks, who together left the room, he quitting the house and she going down to entertain a visitor, as stated above. Those were the last words the Vice-President was heard to utter, for when Mrs. Hendricks re-entered the room after a few minutes' absence her husband was dead. On the Sunday following the sad event the body of the Vice-President was removed from his late residence to the Court-house, where it lay in state until Tuesday, the day of the funeral. During Sunday and Monday many thousand people passed in line to view the remains.

On Tuesday morning the Postmaster-General and the Secretaries of State, War, and Navy, together with the Senatorial and Congressiona Committee, reached Indianapolis to take part in the obsequies. The President had expressed his intention of going, but was dissuaded from doing so, for the reason that in case of accident to him the Nation would be without a head. The funeral was largely attended, all the civic and military orders in Indianapolis being in line, besides immense numbers of people from every part of the Union, special trains from all points having been run for the purpose. The pallbearers were Gov. Isaac P. Gray, ex-Gov. Albert G. Porter, Hon. W. A. Woods, Judge of the United States Court; Hon. John L. McMaster, Mayor of Indianapolis; Aquilla Jones, David Macy, and Judge Frederick Rand, all of Indianapolis.

The burial casket was similar to the one in which Gen. Grant was buried, with the exception that it was covered with black broadcloth, and was made entirely of cedar, there being no son of Thomas Williams, of Petrolia, Pa., on the metalic lining. 28th ult., while visiting a neighbor's boy, dis-The interment took place in the Hendricks

SKETCH OF MR. HENDRICKS'S LIFE. Thomas Andrews Hendricks was born at Zanesville, O., Sept. 7, 1819. When an infant hut of old ties, in which they had gone to sleep. his parents moved to Madison, Ind. At the age of 24 young Hendricks commenced the practice of law at Shelbyville, and a few years later commenced his political career as a Member of the Indiana Legislature. In 1851 he was sent to the State Constitutional Convention. Schuyler Colfax, Wm. S. Holman and himself were the youngest delegates. He took an important part in the debates, and so distinguished himself that on his return home he was elected to Congress. During his second term at Washington he brought down on himself a storm of abuse by voting for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise. He pleaded that he did so in support of popular sovereignty, but his constituents were deaf to excuses. He remained in private life for a few months only, when President Pierce, in August, 1855, tendered him the appointment of Commissioner of the General Land Office, which position he held four years, when he returned to Indiana and received the Democratic nomination for Governor, but was defeated by Henry S. Lane. In 1863 he was sent to the United States Senate, and remained in that position until 1869, when he was again nominated for Governor, but again defeated. In 1872 once more he entered the Gubernatorial race, and this time was successful. In 1876 he was second on the Presidential ticket with Mr. Tilden, and after his defeat remained in comparative seclusion, attending to his lucrative law practice, until elected Vice-President last

The Balkan War. During the past week the Bulgarians have had an almost uninterrupted success. The last Servian has been driven over the border, and Prince Alexander of Bulgaria, although desired by the Powers to stop fighting, refused to listen to any terms until he found himself on Servian territory, and it seems even then that the victorious Bulgarians would have pressed on and punished the enemy more severely had not Austria steppped in and demanded that the Bulgarians should advance no further, when Prince Alexander agreed to an armistice. Previous to this, however, a severe battle was fought at Pirot, in which the Bulgarians forced the Servians to retire at the point of the bayonet. The fighting was of the most desperate nature, the town being taken and retaken several times, but finally remained in the hands of the Bulgarians. It is estimated that both sides lost 3,000 in killed and wounded.

HARPER'S WEEKLY.

HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES. Subscription per Year, $4.00.

ber dated January 2, 1886, issued on December 30, 1885.

HARPER'S WEEKLY justifies its title as "A Journal of Civilization" by reflecting, with steadly increasing fulness and accuracy, the progress of civilization, and by embodying as well as by recording the continuous advance of American literature and American art. It presents, in faithful and graphic pictures, the noteworthy events of the day, portraits of men of the time, reproductions of the works of celebrated artists, cartoons by eminent pictorial satirists, and huntorous illustrations of the ludicrous aspects of social and political life. Besides the pictures, HARPER'S WEEKLY is full of good reading. It always contains instalments of one, occasionally of two, of the best novels of the day, with fine illustrations. Its short stories are bright and entertaining. Poems, sketches, and papers on important topics of current interest by the most popular writers, and columns of humorous and personal paragraphs, make it interesting to everybody. As a family journal, the care that has been successfully exercised in the past to make HAR-PER'S WEEKLY a safe, as well as a welcome, visitor to every household will not be relaxed in the future. The ultimate influence of the subjects treated in its text and in its illustrations is not ess considered than their immediate public interest. It is conducted in the belief that such scenes as would be repulsive or brutalizing to persons witnessing them cannot form fit subjects for literary or pictorial representation by Confederate soldiers. This is a moving story of the experience of soldiers and people of the South; how they loved and hated, starved and died; and abounds in fun, constantly intermingled with the tenderest pathos. Its descriptions of scenery and people and modes of life in East Tennessee, Northern Georgia and Alabams, and of the morals and manner of thinking of the people and soldiers of the South, and of the relations of these to the negroes, are indescribably attractive.

The book, which is bound in paper, has heretofore sold at 75 cents; but THE NATIONAL TRIBUNE has secured a small lot, which it will furnish to its subscribers in any part of the country, postage paid, for 50 cents: or we will send a free copy to whoever sends us in a Club of fire.
